Alissa and Tex love to camp under the night sky. They love to be outside on a warm August night.

For their trip, they haul boots, wood, and a few good books to the camp site.

When the tent is pitched and the fire is hot, they set up the chairs and sit down
to relax.

The heat from the fire keeps them toasty warm as the night gets cooler.

"Look up, Tex!" says Alissa.

Alissa and Tex look up. The bright moon shines in the sky.

"The moon looks so big!"
says Tex.

Alissa agrees!

"The stars are so bright!"
says Alissa.

"Let's read a book by the fire," says Tex. "The moon and stars can be the light!"

"Yes! I have a good book! It is set in a school. Yes, let's do it!" says Alissa.

Alissa and Tex get hooked
on the story as Alissa reads.

Tex sees the fire is just embers, but he isn't spooked.

The moon is still bright and he wants Alissa to keep reading the story.

The fire burns out, but Alissa and Tex don't pause. They read on!

They read all night by the light of the moon.
