Exploring Nova Scotia's rich wine heritage

WELCOME TO THE FALL edition of Crush magazine!

As the leaves turn and the harvest season comes into full swing, we're excited to bring you a collection of stories that celebrate the spirit, history, and innovation of Canada's vineyard and winery management industry.

In this issue, we explore Nova Scotia's rich wine heritage, dating back over 400 years to the first plantings. This eastern province, recognized as Canada's original wine region, continues to produce remarkable wines, combining tradition with modern techniques. We also dive into the evolving practices in farming and winemaking, with a particular focus on sustainability—a key priority for the industry today.

We hear from Vitis-imports, El Nova, and Orenda Safety, all dedicated to providing valuable products and services for vineyards and wineries. In British Columbia, wineries are celebrating the season with "Fall for B.C. Wine," and Kelowna's Sperling Vineyards shares a century of tradition and timeless vines.

For those looking to improve their online presence, we discuss the importance of website updates. Plus, we showcase Pillitteri Estates' journey from Niagara to China and highlight hidden gem wineries in Norfolk County.

We hope you enjoy this edition of Crush magazine and thank you for reading. Cheers!

Tammy

Brock Cool Climate Oenology and Viticulture Institute (CCOVI) researcher and Assistant Professor of Biological Sciences Jim Willwerth (left) and CCOVI Principal Scientist Sudarsana Poojari (right) with virus-free vines in the Brock-based national grapevine germplasm repository.

FACED WITH A CHANGING climate, increased urbanization and a growing population, Canada is in critical need of sustainable agriculture solutions — and Brock University is ready to help.

Brock is building a state-of-the-art research farm to transform the country's agriculture ecosystem into a self-reliant, sustainable model for the world.

Initiated by scientists and researchers at the University's Cool Climate Oenology and Viticulture Institute (CCOVI), the government-funded, multi-institutional Clean Agriculture for Sustainable Production project will help Canada's grape and wine industry by developing high throughput screening methods for grapevine viruses and production processes for disease-free, high-quality grapevines. The project will also explore how "clean plants" interact with other plants in field ecosystems, and measure urban applications of biodiversification efforts, such as green rooftops or community gardens.

With the Canadian grape and wine industry alone requiring an estimated 6.2 million new virus-free grapevines each year, the techniques developed to support this industry will spark a cascade of innovation, said project co-lead CCOVI Principal Scientist Sudarsana Poojari.

With the ability to develop, produce and study environmentally-conscious agronomy from lab to field to urban environments, the future of sustainable agriculture begins at Brock.

Nova Scotia's growing wine industry

The tradition of winemaking in the province continues to evolve, contributing to the region's reputation for producing distinctive wines

By Lisa Kopochinski

Recognized as Canada's original wine region, Nova Scotia's history of viticulture dates back more than 400 years with the first plantings being in Bear River.

OVER THE PAST FIVE years, the farm wine industry in Nova Scotia has experienced significant and sustainable growth for an emerging wine region. This growth has generally been faster than anticipated, driven by increasing recognition of Nova Scotia wines both domestically and internationally.

Recognized as Canada's original wine region, Nova Scotia's history of viticulture dates back more than 400 years with the first plantings being in Bear River. The province's climate and geography, particularly around the Annapolis Valley and other microclimates throughout the province, provide ideal conditions for grape growing.

"The tradition of winemaking in Nova Scotia continues to evolve, contributing to the region's reputation for producing distinctive wines," says Haley Brown, Executive Director, Wine Growers Nova Scotia.

"Our province's unique terroir—environmental factors— supports the cultivation of both hybrid grapes that do exceptionally well in cool climates and vinifera varieties such as Chardonnay, Riesling, and Pinot Noir. These varieties have thrived and are receiving acclaim and awards not only across Canada, but globally. Boutique farm wine regions such as Nova Scotia are becoming sought after not only for their quality wines that are connected to the soil, but also as travel destinations, drawing visitors to experience the scenic vineyards, wine tastings, maritime cultural charm, and hospitality."

According to the latest data, there are approximately 20 licensed grape farm wineries and 70 grape growers in Nova Scotia. This number has been increasing steadily as more individuals and businesses invest in viticulture and winemaking in the region.

"The farm wine industry brings in $245 million of economic value to the province of Nova Scotia every year, and the vibrancy of our rural wine region is getting noticed," says Brown.

Industry Recovery Challenges

While the province's wine industry has had much success, it has not been without challenges particularly over the past five years, including disruptions caused by COVID-19, the polar vortex of 2023, and other environmental factors.

"However, the industry has shown resilience," explains Brown. "It is bouncing back through various strategies such as diversifying offerings, enhancing marketing efforts, and continuing to innovate with quality and sustainability—whether it be environmental, community, or economic—being at the forefront."

Also helping greatly is tourism. The Nova Scotia farm wine industry attracts well over 150,000 visitors annually. In 2019, nearly $50 million in tourism dollars was generated. Many tourists come from within the Maritimes, other parts of Canada, the United States, and increasingly from international markets such as Europe, all drawn by the scenic vineyards, wine tastings, and culinary experiences.

"We are also hearing consistent feedback that we are seeing those 2019 numbers again, which is being well received with cautious optimism," says Brown.

It is anticipated that by 2030, Nova Scotia's market share of wine sales will remain stable at 13.4 per cent. Several factors contribute to this stability, including steady growth over the past five years, increasing recognition of Nova Scotia wines, more investments in the industry, and broader distribution across Canada and internationally.

“The farm wine industry brings in $245 million of economic value to the province of Nova Scotia every year.”

“As Nova Scotia wines become more renowned and are poured at restaurants coast to coast and elsewhere, this stable growth trajectory is expected to continue,” adds Brown.

Types of Wines Produced

Nova Scotia is known for producing a variety of wines, including hybrid varieties that excel in cool climates, and vinifera varieties such as Chardonnay and Pinot Noir.

While 80 per cent of the world's wines are made from just 20 grape varieties, Brown says Nova Scotia takes pride in its unique varietals such as L'Acadie Blanc, which the region is known for and has put the province on the map.

“L'Acadie Blanc is a hybrid grape specifically suited for Nova Scotia's climate, noted for its crisp acidity and delicate fruit flavours. Another standout in the region is Tidal Bay wine, an appellation unique to Nova Scotia and an ode to Old World appellations like Chianti, Champagne, and Bordeaux.”

She adds that it is the only appellation in North America crafted to reflect the terroir and characteristics of Nova Scotia's maritime climate. “Tidal Bay wines are known for their bright acidity, floral aromatics, and notes of orchard fruits, showcasing how the farm wine region and community collaborate to produce distinctive wines that reflect their unique environment.”

Another grape variety that holds special significance for Nova Scotia is L'Acadie Blanc. Named after the historic region of Acadia, which included parts of present-day Nova Scotia, this grape is a hybrid developed specifically for the province's climate by grape breeder J.H. Drapeau and Roger Dial, who were among the early pioneers who recognised its potential.

"L'Acadie Blanc has become a cornerstone of Nova Scotia's farm wine industry, known for its ability to thrive in cool climates and produce wines with crisp acidity and delicate fruit flavours," says Brown. "Its name pays homage to Nova Scotia's heritage and is seen as an honour for the province, showcasing its unique contribution to the world of wine."

Nova Scotia's wine industry benefits significantly from its unique terroir, shaped in part by the Bay of Fundy and its world-renowned tides, which are the largest in the world. The bay's moderate climate creates a cooler climate ideal for producing crisp and aromatic white wines, as well as delicate sparkling wines. The tidal action not only influences the climate, but also the soil composition along the coastline, contributing to the mineral-rich and well-drained soils that grapevines thrive in.

"This unique combination of climate and soil imparts distinctive characteristics to Nova Scotia wines, including vibrant acidity, complex flavours, and a pronounced sense of place that reflects the province's maritime environment." ▲

Cheers to the evolution of the wine industry

Farming and winemaking practices evolve with a focus on sustainability

By Lisa Kopochinski

WHEN ONE THINKS OF a specific industry that has evolved quickly over the past five years, many may think of technology. While this is definitely true, many may not know that the grape and wine industry has also seen tremendous growth in the past half-decade.

Jessica Solanki is the Liebling Wines and Vineyard Manager for Huebel Grape Estates in Niagara on the Lake. She says new wineries and virtual wineries are opening their doors and online stores across the province.

"Young-ish winemakers are making their own brands and crafting their wine in styles that are avant-garde and cheeky. It's so exciting to witness," says Solanki. "In the past five years we have seen a lot of investment in the grape and wine industry which has led to greater innovation and research helping us continue bettering the industry."

Farming and winemaking practices have also evolved considerably, with the main the main focus being sustainability.

Cubby Sadoon can relate to this. As assistant winemaker at Ferox Estate Winery at Niagara on the Lake, he says the industry has certainly evolved in the format of farming, viticulture, oenology and—from a more sociological standpoint—inclusivity.

"We have broken boundaries in Niagara, Ontario, and Canada, and it is safe to say that has happened internationally as well," says Sadoon. "Regions like the Loire Valley have been at the forefront of winemaking in France, changing perceptions of what was considered classic in the country."

He says there has also been a push toward a more scientific foundation in winemaking, allowing "New World" regions and countries to produce wines that can compete with "Old World Europe" on a grandiose scale.

"Moreso, I do think there has been a change in guard, with a lot of winemakers, producers, and families that own vineyards and wineries passing it on generationally, allowing a fresh and youthful perspective on our relatively young industry, at least in Ontario," says Sadoon. "For me personally, I entered the industry at the age of 18, and within a short span of time, started to produce for wineries domestically and internationally."

He adds that the alcohol industry is a fickle one, with trends and fads influencing perception and buying. "And the more young people that enter, the better our grasp is on what is considered 'popular' and our ability to cater to what is demanded."

Big push

Currently heading into her third harvest, Allison Findlay is the first female winemaker at the Niagara College Teaching Winery. She says it is her responsibility to mentor and educate the next generation of winemakers, while also managing the production of a 3,500-case estate winery.

"What I love most about the wine industry is that there are no two days or wines that are the same," says

Findlay. "My job is never boring, and I love that I get to play mad scientist and creative director all in the same day."

She says young people have always been interested in this industry, and that many of her students come to it from a previous education background or after a few years of work experience.

"They want a job they are passionate about. As the industry evolves, I envision more young people entering the industry through traditional and more diverse opportunities."

Findlay believes that the biggest way to bring people into the industry is to show them that it is moving forward with sustainability in mind. "The wine industry is often regarded as a refined, luxury product, steeped in tradition, which may feel inaccessible to most of the world. To show that we are here for people that are new to the industry is very important. Wine is farming, art, science, history, geography and, most importantly, it's for everyone. The future of our industry relies on the fact that the world is going through climate and social changes. We need to adapt with those changes."

Solanki adds that in her area they are very fortunate to have two great post-secondary schools nearby that focus on winemaking and grape growing and provide practical and technical teachings, giving students the opportunity to work in the field during their education.

"These academic institutions are drawing young people to our region who then stay and build their careers in the grape and wine industry. We need to show that there are not just two jobs—grape grower or winemaker—but many different opportunities in the industry, from research, to marketing, to business management, sales, accounting,

Is Ontario at a crucial junction?

Cubby Sadoon, assistant winemaker at Ferox Estate Winery at Niagara on the Lake—believes the wine industry in Ontario is at a crucial junction and without the help of provincial and federal legislation, it could arrive at a point of no return.

"Ontario has an abundance of incredible producers and growers, and collectively we need to highlight this without being distracted by international wines and their markets. In recent years, varieties like Riesling, Chardonnay, Cabernet Franc, and Pinot Noir have put Ontario on a global map, and we need to sustain that push."

He also says that taxation in Ontario for the wine industry needs to be looked at more carefully.

"On average, 73 per cent of the price paid for every bottle of wine sold in Ontario is taxes and fees, which is high. With producers working a 27-per cent margin, it becomes difficult as a business to compete with Products of Canada or international wine, without justifiably having higher price points."

He says that this, in turn, reflects all the effort, skill and hard work that goes into an artisanal bottle of wine.

Governing bodies like VQA, Ontario Craft Wineries, and WMAO (Wine Marketing Association of Ontario) have been petitioning to see legislation changed, which will reduce additional financial stressors on local producers, but this advocacy needs more impetus from all fronts to ensure continued growth in Ontario.

"Ending on a positive note, Ontario has been taking cues from global trends, with more low-alcohol, balanced white, and sparkling wines. This in turn, is converting newer generations of drinkers to pick wines as their alcohol of choice. The increase in canned wines, and "raw" styles of wine like pétillant naturel has removed the perceived pretentiousness of wines, with a focus on grape, craft, and story. This is attracting more wine tourism to regions like Niagara and Prince Edward County, which benefits us all!"

event management, and more."

Sadoon believes it is important to advocate for educational institutions to offer more industry-relevant programs, and to seek more co-op options with existing wineries—both virtual and brick-and-mortar. He says a move towards demystifying the industry—which for the longest time has had barriers to entry—would help attract more.

"Universities like Brock have an open house through CCOVI (Cool Climate Oenology and Viticulture Institute) that have brought wineries in the region to come and see prospective graduates for employment or co-ops, which I think is a great way to ensure they stay within the industry post-graduation. This is a very subjective take, but I would love the industry to emphasize the science of oenology and viticulture in programs like WSET (Wine and Spirits Education Trust) and CMS (Court of Master Sommeliers), which adds to the cumulative knowledge of wine history, regions, and so on."

He adds that this could bring individuals in programs such as microbiology, analytical sciences, and organic chemistry into wine, without losing foundational skillsets.

"It would be helpful if post-secondary institutions highlight graduates from wine-based programs more often via their marketing campaigns, so that there is an ability to follow alumni from admission to working in the industry, and their impact over the years."

What's next?

As for where the Ontario wine growing industry is headed in the next five years, Solanki says there is a need for government officials to continue to invest and support the local grape and wine industry and ensure that policies are in place to help grow the industry sustainably with local at the forefront.

"Like all other industries, no matter the commodity, there is no magic ball to show what the future will be like. But there are things we can do to ensure that there is growth and stability. In farming, we rely heavily

Vitis-import was born out of a need in the rapidly growing Canadian wine industry

GUILLAUME MERLE, A WINEMAKER'S son for several generations, viticulture consultant, and expert in viticulture/oenology, has been sharing his expertise in Quebec for over 18 years as a winemaker and vineyard manager. His family and professional connections in Europe, combined with his on-the-ground experience, have allowed him to develop the products and services that Vitis-import offers today.

His diverse and innovative range, available at competitive prices, includes the sale of certified vine plants imported from France, trellising equipment, GPS vines/posts planting, and the sale of viticulture equipment all the way to bottling.

The development and filing of patents for vine protection in extreme climates, including two-section posts, metal arches, geotextile roll-out devices, and the mechanization of winter protection make Vitis-import an innovative and forward-thinking company.

Raise a glass to B.C. wineries: Celebrate the return of “Fall for B.C. Wine”

By Leeann Froese, Wineglass Marketing

AS AUTUMN SETTLES ACROSS

British Columbia, the province's wine regions come alive with new energy. This year, Wine Growers British Columbia (WGBC) and Destination British Columbia (DBC) are joining forces to bring the return of the “Fall for B.C. Wine” campaign, a celebration of B.C.'s resilient wine industry. As the sector navigates recent challenges, this initiative is a timely reminder of why B.C. wine matters and why it continues to thrive.

The “Fall for B.C. Wine” campaign, now in its second year, is designed to encourage consumers to connect with B.C. wineries, whether through a visit or by choosing B.C. wines at local retailers and restaurants. Despite climate-related setbacks and a challenging tourism season, B.C. wineries have remained open and resilient, eager to welcome visitors and share their unique offerings.

“From the exceptional people behind the wines to the stunning scenery surrounding our wineries, B.C. wine offers something special for everyone,” says Kimberley Barnes, Marketing Director of WGBC. “While this year's vintage may look a bit different, each bottle still tells the story of the people and places that make B.C. wine unforgettable.”

B.C. wine country is made up of several Geographical Indications (GIs), each with its own distinct terroir, microclimate, and character. These regions create a rich mosaic of wine styles that reflect the land's diversity and the winemakers' dedication.

Here's an overview of BC's wine regions:

- Vancouver Island – Coastal climates bring cool, crisp wines with a distinct maritime influence.
- Gulf Islands – Known for artisanal, small-lot wines with a sense of place.

- Fraser Valley – Close to urban centers, this region offers boutique wineries with a community feel.
- Similkameen Valley – A pristine region among rugged mountains, known for its organic and sustainable wines.
- Okanagan Valley – The largest B.C. wine region, renowned for its variety and vineyard landscapes.
- Kootenays – A newer viticulture region producing cool climate wines.
- Lillooet – A distinctive terroir with strong diurnal temperatures to maintain crisp acidity.
- Shuswap – Cool-climate wines that are fresh and aromatic.
- Thompson Valley – On the edge of cool climate viticulture, expanding the boundaries of B.C. winemaking.

B.C.'s wine industry continues to draw talent from around the world, helping to shape a distinct identity that is increasingly recognized for its quality and innovation. From vineyard tours and tastings to wine-paired dinners, B.C. wineries offer a range of experiences that highlight their commitment to offering the wine lover the best.

Despite facing the impacts of climate challenges and a disrupted tourism season, B.C. wineries have demonstrated resilience and adaptability. "We want to emphasize that B.C. wineries are offering the incredible experiences they are known for," says Miles Prodan, President and CEO of WGBBC. "Support from consumers helps us maintain the vitality of our industry and keep these important wine stories alive."

The "Fall for B.C. Wine" campaign dovetails with DBC's "Fall Has It All" initiative, aimed at drawing visitors to the province during the fall season. Together, these campaigns highlight the enduring appeal of B.C. wine country and the many ways that wineries continue to innovate and provide value.

While encouraging visitation remains a core goal, the campaign also serves as a broader reminder of the importance of supporting local wines, whether enjoyed at home, in restaurants, or purchased from local shops. The message is clear: B.C.'s wine industry is not just surviving; it's flourishing, and every bottle is a reflection of the hard work and passion of its producers.

B.C. wine's appeal lies not just in the bottle but in the connection it fosters between people and place. Whether in a tasting room overlooking the vines or at a dinner table, B.C. wine embodies the spirit of the land and the dedication of the winemakers who craft it.

As the "Fall for B.C. Wine" campaign unfolds, it's a moment for the trade to reflect on the resilience and adaptability of B.C.'s wine industry. This campaign is a call to embrace B.C. wine, celebrate its successes, and ensure its story continues to be told—both in wine country and beyond.

Orenda Safety Services: Enhancing workplace safety in the wine industry

Sheldon McKee, Orenda Safety Services.

Penticton-based business provides services to a wide variety of business including wineries, breweries, manufacturing companies, and more

By Lisa Kopochinski

As the owner of Orenda Safety Services in Penticton, B.C., Sheldon McKee has extensive experience as a safety professional ranging from oil and gas to the wine and beer industry.

Celebrating his 21st year in the business, he holds two trade certifications as a welder and mechanic and has worked on many of the machinery and welded tanks that are in the wine industry. He probably couldn't be in a better location than Penticton with its more than 180 vineyards in one of the best wine regions in the country.

"I moved to Penticton 22 years ago and am able to use my transferable skills in the safety profession here that can provide tangible and quantifiable results," says McKee.

Offering many safety services, most notably he is a confined space entry specialist and develops COR capable Safety Management Systems. "I am also a Certified Machinery Safety Specialist and Incident Investigation Specialist, which allows me to conduct hazard assessments and offer solutions to any machinery, conveyors guarding issues. I offer investigation services to wineries that need an independent and reliable outcome of an incident."

When asked about some of the challenges wine industry professionals face that requires his consulting services, McKee says sometimes they do not fully understand how to implement safety as required by the regulatory bodies.

"I am able to assist them and help them realize that safety does make them money and saves them money. It is just on the back end of the business and some of the savings are not as tangible as seeing actual money."

Common Safety Risks

When asked what some of the most common safety risks are that exist in the wine industry, he doesn't miss a beat. "Confined spaces and machinery injuries. Many times, protective devices are removed or disabled as they are viewed as inconvenient."

There are also cultural differences as many wineries are owned by individuals from a wide range of countries.

"Their view of safety may be different from those in Canada," explains McKee. "I spend a lot of time explaining occupational health and safety, and that the workers have three rights, which include the right to know about health and safety matters; the right to participate in decisions that could affect their health and safety; and the right to refuse work that could affect their health and safety and that of others."

He recalls a specific incident where cultural differences did create a safety issue.

"A winery was ordered to have confined space hazard assessments but kept delaying it. As a last resort, the authority having jurisdiction put a stop work order against them. A competing safety provider gave them a quote that was extremely high. A colleague of mine mentioned my name to them."

McKee said he was called, and a meeting was scheduled, whereby he looked at the winery's configurations and offered solutions to entering the winery tanks.

“I offer investigation services to wineries that need an independent and reliable outcome of an incident.”

"I priced out the traditional confined space training, equipment, and production time that would be affected. I then presented readily available equipment that would clean their tanks as they desired. The cost was less than the traditional path, and it allowed for no production loss. The only confined spaces they had to enter was the juice presses," he says. "The end result was they got the order closed and had a system that allowed them to be compliant and productive."

When not working, McKee loves living in Penticton and has visited many of the region's wineries where he has developed a preference for his wines. "I like Pinot Gris from Tinhorn Creek and Hester Creek. Burrowing Owl has a great fortified wine, and I really like fortified wine on a cold winter day."

Timeless vines

A century of tradition at Kelowna's Sperling Vineyards

ROOTED IN THE HEART of Kelowna's wine country, Sperling Vineyards history stretches back over a century. Established in 1925, the vineyard embodies four generations of winemaking tradition, making it a cornerstone of the Okanagan Valley's rich viticultural legacy.

The vineyard is situated on the slopes of East Kelowna's benches, where the high elevation and mineral-rich soils create the perfect conditions for producing exceptional wines. These conditions, combined with the vineyard's certified organic practices, allow Sperling Vineyards to craft wines that are both environmentally responsible and reflective of the unique terroir of the region. The old vines on the property, some of which are over 50 years old, contribute to the depth and complexity of the wines, particularly the Pinot Noir and Riesling, which are among the vineyard's most celebrated offerings.

Winemaker Ann Sperling, who took over the vineyard from her family, brings a wealth of experience and a deep respect for the land to her work. Under her guidance, Sperling Vineyards has gained a reputation for producing high-quality, terroir-driven wines that have earned acclaim both locally and internationally. Sperling's approach to winemaking is one of minimal intervention, allowing the natural characteristics of the grapes and the vineyard to shine through in every bottle.

The vineyard has been certified organic since 2017, and this commitment to sustainability extends beyond the vineyard to the winery itself, where eco-friendly practices are employed at every stage of production. This dedication to sustainability is not just about protecting the environment; it's also about preserving the vineyard's heritage for future generations.

Visitors to Sperling Vineyards can experience this rich history and commitment to quality firsthand through a visit to the winery's tasting room. Here, guests can sample a range of wines, from the vibrant, citrusy Speritz Sparkling to the robust, earthy Vision Series Old Vines Riesling.

In a region known for its wine production, Sperling Vineyards stands out not just for its longevity but for its commitment to producing wines that reflect the unique character of Kelowna's terroir. Whether you're a seasoned wine enthusiast or a curious newcomer, a visit to Sperling Vineyards offers a journey through time, tradition, and taste, all set against the stunning backdrop of the Okanagan Valley. ▲

Empowering Canadian winemakers with expertise and innovation

ELNOVA HAS BEEN A key player in the winemaking, cider making, and brewing industries across Canada for over 20 years. Established with a mission to provide high-quality equipment and supplies to beverage producers, Elnova has cemented its reputation as a trusted partner within Quebec. However, their growth and recognition have spread far beyond Eastern Canada, as they expand to serve winemakers and beverage producers nationwide.

Elnova's success can be attributed to its ability to cater to the specific needs of small and mid-sized beverage producers. Over the last decade, the company has grown significantly, largely due to its commitment to understanding its clients' unique challenges and providing tailored solutions. The demand for Elnova's services has surged in recent years, leading the company to strengthen its reach outside Quebec. Now, with dedicated sales representatives in Nova Scotia and Ontario, Elnova is better positioned to offer its products and expertise across the entire country.

One of Elnova's key strengths lies in its extensive inventory. The company maintains over $3 million worth of tanks, equipment, supplies, and oenological products, ensuring that clients can find everything they need for their production processes in one place. From fermentation tanks to bottling and labelling equipment, Elnova offers comprehensive solutions designed to streamline winemaking, cider making, and brewing operations. Why website updates are important

(And how to know if you need one)

By Susan DeMatei, Wineglass Marketing

I CAN FEEL YOUR eyerolls and hear your inner voice about this topic. You already have a website, and it works fine. You spent good money to develop it two, three, maybe four years ago. Why do you need to worry about it when so many other priorities are vying for attention and budget?

You will never be current

The only constant thing about technology is that it is constantly changing – and at a frightening pace. Would it surprise you to know that since 2010, new technology and data have increased so fast that it is estimated that 90% of the world's data – like, since forever – was generated in the last two years alone?

When new operating systems are released, they push new hardware to be created (or vice versa), which then mandates software to be updated, which then requires all the plug-ins, ancillary functions, and code to be updated. This all ultimately feeds an environment in which we are continually being faced with new ways of consuming digital content, which ultimately necessitates that we evolve our behaviour continually.

In short, we are in constant learning mode. We no longer need to be told to click here>> on buttons or underlined words, and we know that three little bars on the top of a screen will drop down a menu when we click on it. As technology develops, we absorb that behaviour and move on until the next iteration.

This is why websites built even a few years ago don't look or function like modern websites and don't behave the same way either. Our screens used to be smaller, so websites were square, images were embedded in text, and there was a lot of text! Now, pages are wider, and scrolling is universally acceptable and even preferred.

It's like rolling down windows or turning a key to start a car. It may work, but you're now used to automatic windows and push-button starters. A window is a window just like a navigation bar is a navigation bar, but the way you instinctively interact with it changes. And if you're causing your visitors to pause to figure things out for even a split second, you will lose sales.

According to the Nielsen Norman Group, who are experts in research-based user experience, "Even a few seconds' delay is enough to create an unpleasant user experience. Users are no longer in control, and they're consciously annoyed by having to wait for the computer. Thus, with repeated short delays, users will give up unless they're extremely committed to completing the task. The result? You can easily lose half your sales (to those less-committed customers) simply because your site is a few seconds too slow for each page."

You might be thinking that your website edits are just cosmetic, and not an issue. But would you give a website with a dated design your credit card? What about a website with last year's events on it, and missing images in the cart or broken links? Probably not.

SOURCE: Statista

And you wouldn't be alone. A Stanford study found that 75% of users judge a company's credibility based on its website design, and 94% of first impressions are design related. This means that having a professional-looking website can significantly impact your business.

Google is watching you

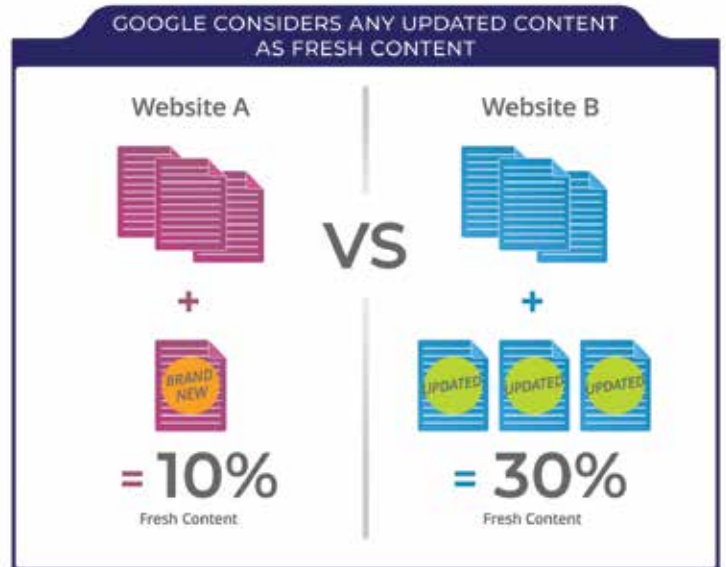

All things being equal, Google will place a higher priority on sites that update their content frequently.

You could keep writing and producing more content to get good Google rankings. But this is complicated and takes a lot of time. Updating old content requires less work and delivers faster results, which can only benefit your overall content marketing strategy.

Update your old content and improve your freshness score to increase the effectiveness of your SEO efforts and boost your search engine traffic. When you tell Google your content is new, you'll get a spike in traffic, making the tiny amount of work required well worth it. If Google recognizes that your site hasn't been updated recently, it will hurt the rankings of all your pages.

Some things you might want to update:

- New information as it becomes available, such as scores, vintages, and team members.
- Irrelevant information, such as updates about past holidays, fire closures, or vintages you don't sell anymore.

- Underperforming content – if you check Google Analytics and nobody is looking at your recipes, then it's time to think of new ways to showcase food pairings.
- Also, update if you just have old content. Some pages that haven't been looked at since they were posted have a high probability of having broken backlinks. This is

WordPress likes to be in charge

Another reason to update your site is that outdated WordPress plugins can damage it. Ignoring your WordPress update notifications may be one of the easiest things to do, but it's also probably the most damaging. Inconsistent updates can lead to serious security issues, compatibility problems, and technical debt.

Security. Updates prevent security vulnerabilities and increase the overall security of your site. When a new version of WordPress comes out, it automatically fixes any security vulnerabilities discovered since the last version. This means you do not have to worry about manually applying patches. As long as you keep up to date with the latest WordPress versions, you'll always be protected from known bugs and security vulnerabilities.

Reliability. Updates make your plugins more reliable. Over the years, we have noticed a pattern with many WordPress plugins; they work fine at first, and then, as I mentioned, software and hardware get changed, and if not updated, the plugins eventually stop working altogether.

Efficiency. Updating your plugins makes them better at what they do. In other words, your plugins will work better over time. When you install an update, the new version of the plugin automatically optimizes code, speeds up operations, and eliminates unnecessary code.

Compatibility. Updating plugins helps them stay compatible with the latest versions of WordPress. Each plugin's repository page shows the current version of WordPress it supports. If a plugin does not show a version number, it means that it is no longer maintained.

Types of Content

As a general rule, we recommend that most businesses should be updating their website at least once a month. This gives you enough time to make small changes and updates as needed without overwhelming yourself or your team. Of course, if you have the resources to update your site more frequently, then you should definitely do so.

Guidelines to plan your updates in the future

Static content

If you have a simple website with just a few pages of static content, then you probably don't need to update it more than once or twice a year. Of course, if you have news or events that you want to share with your visitors, then you can update your website more frequently. But in general, a static corporate website doesn't need to be updated too often.

Written content

If you have a blog or news website, then you'll need to update your site much more frequently – ideally, on a daily basis. This is because people who visit these types of websites are looking for new, fresh content. If you're not updating your site regularly, then they'll quickly lose interest and move on to another site.

eCommerce content

On the other hand, if you have an e-commerce site with dozens of products, you'll need to update your site much more frequently. This is because you'll need to add new products and update product descriptions and pricing.

Visual content

And finally, don't forget images as part of your content. You should be updating your product images with vintage changes, but also, if you can update your images with the seasons about your tasting room and visitation, it will give cues that you are a special place to visit any time of the year.

Your website is a part of your overall marketing plan

If all of this seems daunting, divide and conquer. Ask your assistant winemaker to give you three or four sentences and photos of the vineyard each month. Task the tasting room with writing fun copy for the weekend events. If everyone gets in the habit of updating a website and it is kept updated, it is less of a chore than if it's been neglected for months or even years.

Your social media pages also offer a great opportunity to promote your website and keep it updated. You can use social media to share new blog posts, announce product updates, run contests, and even incorporate short-form videos. Just make sure that you're not spamming your followers with too many promotions, or you'll risk losing them. A good rule is to post one promotion for every ten pieces of content that you share. This way, you're still providing valuable information to your followers while also promoting your website.

Your social media pages also offer a great opportunity to promote your website and keep it updated. You can use social media to share new blog posts, announce product updates, run contests, and even incorporate short-form videos.

One of the best ways to ensure that your website is being updated regularly is to create a content calendar. This will help you to schedule your posts in advance and make sure that you're always publishing new content. You can use a tool such as Google Calendar or Trello to create your content calendar, or you can simply use a spreadsheet. Whichever method you choose, make sure that you update your calendar on a regular basis so that you can always be prepared with new content.

Finally, it's important to keep track of your website's stats so that you can see how your updates are impacting your traffic and performance. Google Analytics is a great free tool that you can use to track your website's traffic. By monitoring your stats, you can see which changes are having the most positive impact on your website. This will help you to determine which updates are worth investing more time and effort in, and it will also help you avoid making changes that don't improve your site's performance.

Discover hidden gem wineries in Norfolk County

Provided by Destination Ontario

WHETHER YOU ENJOY A Malbec or Marquette or prefer sipping sauvignon blanc, this under-the-radar region is a must-visit for all wine lovers.

Norfolk County has been a well-known tourist destination in Ontario for decades, from birdwatchers flocking to see the spring migration to beach lovers soaking up the sun. Norfolk's stretch of shoreline and scenic farm fields is also home to a flourishing wine scene.

Nestled between two of Ontario's more established wine regions, Niagara and the North Shore of Lake Erie, Norfolk County offers wine enthusiasts the opportunity to experience new, up-and-coming wineries.

With an impressive range of reds, whites, and rosés, you're sure to find a glass that'll pique your palate's interest at one of these Norfolk County wineries.

Wineries with accommodations

Burning Kiln Winery

With scenic vineyards featuring grape varieties from Pinot Grigio to Petit Verdot, Burning Kiln Winery has been welcoming wine lovers since 2011.

Located just outside of Turkey Point, it's hard to resist sitting back and savouring a glass of something delicious on this winery's inviting patio, complete with red umbrellas, twinkling string lights, and communal fire pit.

But before you get comfy on the patio, learn a thing or two about wine and sharpen your palate with a guided tasting, tutorial, or tour. The winery's restaurant, The Back Extend your visit with an overnight stay. Book the three-bedroom on-site farmhouse built in 1865 or treat yourselves to luxury glamping accommodations across the road at Long Point Eco Adventures.

Bonnieheath Estate Lavender & Winery

If you're looking for things to do near Port Dover, take a trip up the road to Bonnieheath Estate Lavender & Winery in Waterford. Enjoy a glass of wine or a pint of cider as you take in the relaxing aroma of lavender on this beautiful 52-hectare farm.

The farm dates back to the early 1800s as a tobacco producer for many years before transforming into one of Ontario's favourite spots for artisan wine.

Bonnieheath's picturesque vineyard grows nine different grape varieties, which are picked, processed, and crafted into award-winning wines. But you won't find your average grape. The farm grows lesser-known vines like Petite Pearl and Frontenac Gris for a truly unique wine experience in a truly unique setting.

Reserve a picnic and charcuterie board for a highly Instagrammable afternoon and roll into the evening by booking an overnight in the cellar suite or luxury farmhouse.

Day visit wineries

Front Road Cellars and Blueberry Hill Estates

Overlooking Lake Erie, Front Road Cellars at Blueberry Hill Estates is a rustic winery producing both grape and fruit wines as well as small-batch ciders.

Start your tasting flight with the Fumé Blanc, a barrel-fermented expression of L'Acadie Blanc, a lesser-known, local grape varietal. Move on to the "House Party Phat Red," an easy-drinking Cabernet Franc packed with red fruit aromas and a peppery punch. Finish your flight with a sip of the off-dry Bramble & Vine, a sparkling wine made from grapes and blueberries that, according to the winery, tastes like, "your mom's wine cooler all grown up".

Don't forget to visit the pick-your-own blueberry patch during harvest season.

Hounds of Erie Winery

Located on the north shore of Lake Erie in the beautiful town of Clear Creek, Hounds of Erie Winery is planted with unique vines and apple trees used to make hand-crafted wines and hard ciders.

Try their "Best in Show" cider, a crisp, refreshing blend of 21 different kinds of heritage cider apples. Or crack open a bottle of their dry, bubbly rosé made from the Crimson Pearl varietal.

If you happen to be a wine lover and a dog owner, this is the perfect spot for you. As the name suggests, Hounds of Erie Winery welcomes four-legged family members—they even host breed-specific meetups from May to September. Open seasonally only.

Frisky Beaver Wines

From delicious reds, like "Cocky Cabernet" to thirst-quenching whites, like "Shades of Grey" chardonnay, there's something for every palate at this welcoming winery. Just minutes outside of Port Dover, grab a glass of Frisky Beaver wine and sip the night away while listening to live music on the estate's patio.

If you happen to be an eco-conscious connoisseur, know that both their red and white house blends are sold in paper bottles made from 94% recycled material—don't worry, they don't leak.

Inasphere Wines

With arguably the best views in all of Norfolk County, Inasphere Wines is a fully functioning winery and farm.

Sample a sauvignon blanc or sparkling Riesling in the hilltop tasting room, overlooking the fields and meadows below with Lake Erie in the distance. Be sure to check out the charming farm market, featuring estate-grown veggies as well as local produce from surrounding Norfolk County farms. A great way to fill your picnic basket.

Niagara roots to global heights: Pillitteri Estates' sweet journey from Niagara to China

Estates Winery.*

PILLITTERI ESTATES WINERY, LOCATED in the heart of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, is a family-owned and operated winery with deep roots in the region's winemaking tradition.

The winery produces a diverse range of wines, including table wines, sparkling wines, and their flagship product, Icewine. Pillitteri's Icewine, made from grapes naturally frozen on the vine, is renowned worldwide for its rich, concentrated sweetness and complex flavour profile. In addition to Icewine, the winery also offers a variety of red, white, and rosé wines, each crafted to reflect the unique terroir of Niagara-on-the-Lake. Their wines have garnered numerous awards both domestically and internationally, solidifying Pillitteri's status as a leader in the Canadian wine industry.

Founded by Gary Pillitteri in 1993, the winery reflects the Pillitteri family's dedication to producing high-quality wines that embody the rich heritage of the Niagara region. The family's involvement in every aspect of the winery's operations has been key to its success. From the vineyards to the cellar, each family member plays a critical role in maintaining the winery's reputation for excellence.

Since its inception, Pillitteri has not only established itself as a leader in the Canadian wine industry but also made significant strides in international markets, particularly in Asia, with a strong emphasis on China.

The winery's journey into the Asian market began in 1995, with Taiwan being their first international export destination. Over the years, Pillitteri expanded its presence throughout Asia, making the region their largest export market. Recognizing the unique logistical challenges associated with distributing wine in Asia, Pillitteri made a strategic decision in 2013 to establish a permanent office and warehouse in mainland China. This move was pivotal in ensuring efficient distribution and meeting the growing demand for their products, particularly Icewine, which has become increasingly popular among Chinese consumers.

China's market has been especially receptive to Pillitteri's Icewine, a product that pairs exceptionally well with traditional Asian cuisine. Icewine, with its rich, sweet flavour profile, has been embraced as a premium product, making it a staple in the luxury wine segment in China. Beyond Icewine, Canadian table wines are also gaining traction, a trend Pillitteri is actively promoting as they continue to build brand awareness and market share in the region.

Pillitteri's success in China is not just about the popularity of their products but also their commitment to understanding and integrating into the local market. By establishing a dedicated office, they have been able to navigate the complexities of the Chinese market, from regulatory requirements to consumer preferences, more effectively.

The winery's international strategy also includes the Pillitteri International Wine Agency, which leverages the winery's extensive experience in the global market to assist other international wine producers in entering the Canadian market, particularly through the Liquor Control Board of Ontario (LCBO). This initiative reflects Pillitteri's deep understanding of the global wine trade and their commitment to fostering international partnerships.

Through their operations in China and other markets, Pillitteri continues to expand their global footprint, bringing the flavours of Niagara to wine enthusiasts around the world. ▲
