LICENSURE EXAMINATION FOR AGRICULTURIST

Legend:

Red - First Timers / First Takers

Blue - Repeaters

Green - Overall Performance

Yellow - National Passing Rate

The results of the licensure examination for agriculturists have been impressive in recent years. From 2018 to 2022, the ratings for first time test takers (red) have consistently exceeded the national passing rate (yellow). This is evidenced by the fact that the overall performance of these students has closely mirrored the national passing rate.

The performance of repeaters (blue) has been a bit more variable over the last five years. This can be attributed to the fact mostly of them graduated long time ago. Despite these fluctuations, the performance of the CARES in licensure examinations for agriculturists has been consistently higher than the national passing rate. This is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the students, as well as the quality of instruction they have received.

The CARES also produces topnotchers in the LEA. In 2022, Melody R. Basinang (6th placer), Darren Joy G. Gandas (9th placer), Dioden H. Sampiano (10th placer) were included in the list. It was Lyka A. Servidad that positioned in 3rd place in 2019 LEA.

The Licensure Examination for Agriculture (LEA) results for 2018 were quite impressive despite the limited number of test takers. First-time takers had a 100% passing rate, whereas those who took the test for the second time had a 33.33% passing rate. Overall, the LEA's performance of the CARES students was more than 20% higher than the passing rate for the entire nation. This is a great accomplishment and an indication that the graduates of CARES were doing something right.

The results of the Licensure Examination for Agriculture (LEA) for 2019 were impressive. The number of takers from the College of Agriculture Resources and Environmental Sciences (CARES) reached up to 41 graduates. Out of the total takers, 39 passed the examination, making the passing rate of CARES to be 95.12%. This is significantly higher than the national passing rate of 41.05%. It is no wonder CARES was awarded as the second top performing school for agriculture in the Philippines.

One of the graduates, Lyka Servidad, was able to get to the top three of all the passers. This is a testament to the excellence of CARES in providing quality education to its students. With the students' hard work and the school's support and dedication, it is no surprise that they have achieved such great results.
