

Hidden by Clouds

An oil painting of a Gwent Skyscape. The scene depicts a vast, hazy landscape with rolling hills and a body of water in the foreground. The sky is filled with large, billowing clouds in shades of white, cream, and pale blue, with some darker, more textured areas of grey and blue. The brushwork is visible, giving the painting a sense of movement and depth. The overall mood is serene and atmospheric.

My Haiku Notebook (2025)

A Gwent Skyscape - from an original oil painting by George Godsell

Welcome to my online poetry journal. An eclectic collection of favourite haiku, and other Japanese short-form poetry, that I've written over the last few years - updated every now and then, as the wind blows. Thanks to the editors and publishers of the following journals in which many of them originally appeared ...

Wales Haiku Journal

hedgerow: a journal of small poems

The Pan Haiku Review/Blōō Outlier Journal

failed haiku – a journal of English Senryu

Presence Haiku Journal

first frost – journal of haiku & senryu tsuri-dōrō – a small journal of haiku, senryū

Scarlet Dragonfly Journal

民句 folk ku: a journal in honour of Masaoka Shiki

Poetry Pea Journal and Podcast

The Wee Sparrow Poetry Press

My poems have been variously described as 'transcendental' – 'inspiring, interesting, and brilliantly written.' Like 'love letters to nature' – 'conjuring many layers of loveliness, with the lightness of gently falling leaves'. Such beautiful words to treasure. Thank you!

They are also mostly about birds.

my backyard
a winter wren
fills the space

still waters
a fish jumps through my reflection
the ripples
of our affair

chough tumble
down the quarry face rain turns to sleet

skipping stones one two three fourfivesixseveneight coot skitter

among lily pads summer rain

up in the attic crawling through my childhood

blue moon—a heron and I night fishing

rewilding the garden sparrowhawk

night fishing
a heron stalks the hunters moon

clouds across the stubble winter thrushes swift scream down cobbled streets bikers follow the pulsing beat of a cruising car

sunshine in every room the cuckoo's call

waking up
the sounds of the day
waking up

harvest moon hidden by clouds a plover's call morning assembly

the chatter of sparrows in the playground

wild camping
a robin joins us for breakfast

evensong a song thrush lends his voice

after the storm
gathering windfalls ... pinkfeet calling

above the river beat drumming snipe

distant bells
deep in the holly robin song

indian summer
the wild strawberry in bloom again

balloon fest
a windhover
glides away

waking up
next to you
waking up

flower moon
her scent of jasmine in every room

sunshine and showers a scattering of daisies winter solitude

the fading shadow of my footprints

easy listening
a woodpigeon croons an old favourite

first light the pink of chaffinch in the cherry primroses in the hedgerow bank a robin's nest bursting through his song a whitethroat hide-and-seek in the churchyard

a new headstone

goldcrests in every bush a woodcock moon taking tea with grandma she reads the leaves dusting my children's bookshelves the adventures we had no

mow may cowslips
flower
along the verge

spring cleaning before the cuckoo chiffchaff cherry blossom

drifting in the window chaffinch song

done and dusted the kettle whistles autumn crocus the highlights in her hair all hallows' eve blackbirds seeing ghosts in every bush

garage sale
my childhood toys resurrected

bedtime story the jackdaws finally settled on the shoreline

the ebb and flow
... of sanderling

pillow talk a conversation of ravens among the cardboard boxes a homeless dog hunters moon Orion whistles his dogs

fresh snow
drifting from the sky winter swans

overnight redwings among the windfalls at the edge of the wood the scritch of a jay lighting up a winter's day bullfinches drifting snow

the only sound
my footsteps

grasshoppers my puppies jump sunny days tease a blackbird's song empty feeders a frosty glint in the robin's eye

caught by the breeze a kestrel's cry held by the silence the bark of a raven spring thaw ...

through the waterfall
a dipper's nest

boxing day walk an early primrose lunch break a jackdaw catches my eye where rivers meet the dipper doubles back tracing a path

through the trees
beaver moon

leafing through my books an arctic warbler

cold moon the herons frozen shadow longest day yellowhammers sing on into the night up on the downs a skylark takes me higher

the wing prints of a grouse

autumn gales all the colours of the leaves slack tide the heron waits winter moon a twinkle in the snowman's eye

shadows on the wall chasing sleep hanging out our winter woolies first swallow

distant bells
across the meadows skylark song

wagtails ...
playing hopscotch
after school

becoming day a grey heron among the windfalls a chaffinch nest forest trail

a nuthatch whistles
our dogs

higher than our highest kite skylarks distant gunshots:

the clatter of pigeons

clocking off my five o'clock shadow tucked up in bed

lights twinkle
in darkening skies
an owl hoots

shadows on the wall
chasing sleep

surf's up ...
a raft of scoters
crest the waves

christmas dinner the same old jokes

shooting the breeze
... with my dog

bookending
the shortest night blackbirds

now a steam train starling whistle wishing ...

we'd had more time dandelions

between showers flashes of summer goldfinches drifting clouds now a dragon coming out a pink moon waiting for the moment last swallow evening mist owls hoot from all around snoozing the alarm call of a wren windswept a mountain blackbird counting crows

a nursery rhyme
long forgotten

under the willow a splash of blue a spider's web all that's left our dreams hidden in her winter boots ... a conker

all souls' night a screech owl in my headlights

carol singers outside the door a robin song

Clive is a sometime philosopher, thinker, dreamer, birdwatcher, poet, and occasional writer. Living and writing in beautiful North Wales. He draws inspiration from nature, especially birds, which he has been watching for as long as he can remember.

Retired now he continues to watch birds and has taken to writing haiku about them. He has had poems published in many of the leading haiku journals and recently has self published two groundbreaking digital ebooks (Flipbooks) of his poetry. This is his first full length collection.

Authors Notes

The birdsong recordings were digitally copied from my original shellac records (1936) by Ludwig Koch (1881 – 1974) or downloaded from Xeno Canto a website dedicated to sharing bird sounds from all over the world.

The ambient background music, sourced and downloaded from Pixabay, was originally recorded by Amurich (an Ethno & Electronic musician from Murmansk).

The vocal track accompanying my bio was generated using AI (Suno AI Music).
