How Should a Christian Stand on Mandatory Vaccination?

by Jonathan Shuttlesworth

Mandatory Vaccination in Light of Bible Prophecy

When Israel was reborn as a nation, a race toward the final events foretold in Revelation began. If it feels like something is off, it's because something is. The endgame of the antichrist spirit is to produce a one world ruler, one world government, one world religion, one world military, and one world economy. We are now seeing the beginning of that push. The United Nations, used as the vehicle of implementation, has set 2030 as its goal to bring the entire globe under total population control in fulfillment of Bible Prophecy.

If the accusation was made 18 months ago, that Covid was being used to accelerate this agenda, the accuser would be labeled a conspiracy theorist. But not anymore. The dystopian nightmare of Revelation is now openly discussed by politicians and pundits on national news every day! 15 days to slow the spread has now turned into the attempted demolition of free nations. The constitution replaced by the WEF, CDC, and WHO. Your vote replaced by the mandates of unelected health ministers and bureaucrats.

What is the Christian's response? Should the church just accept defeat, knowing what is to come? NO. The church is the restrainer of 2 Thessalonians 2:6 and has a Bible responsibility to actively stand against The Antichrist Spirit! We are not defeated; Christ gave us dominion over all the power of The Devil and that dominion is intact. Our knowledge of Bible Prophecy must never produce a posture of defeat. Jesus is not returning for a defeated bride; but a glorious, victorious church!

Therefore, since we know this push toward total population control is Satanic, the Christian has a responsibility to resist and stand against it with every fiber of their being.

9 Rock Solid Reasons to Reject the Covid Vaccine

1. Crossing the Bridge of the Mark

15 days to slow the spread has now become, do whatever you're told, or you will not be allowed to participate in society. As you read in Revelation how the Antichrist will require everyone to receive a mark in/on their hand or forehead or otherwise face beheading, even as someone who believes the Bible, this sounded preposterous. I always wondered how a society would be accepting of a policy mandating forced injection to buy or sell. Sadly, with the implementation of the vaccine passport, I no longer have to wonder.

Though this vaccine is not The Mark of The Beast, it is most certainly being used to set up the framework for its arrival. For The Mark of the Beast to become a reality, at some point the bridge of mandated injection to participate in the economy would have to be crossed. This is it! And on these grounds alone, it should be fiercely opposed.

2. Manipulation is Satanic in Nature

When did it change from, "the vaccine is available," to, "If you don't get both shots and a follow up shot every 5 months, you cannot earn a living?" When did it start being okay to force someone to do something against their will? God never works by manipulation or coercion—Satan does. Scripture tells you to never push someone to violate their own conscience.

To threaten someone's livelihood and family welfare unless they do what you say is evil and Satanic in nature. Follow the example of Daniel and stand for what you know is right.

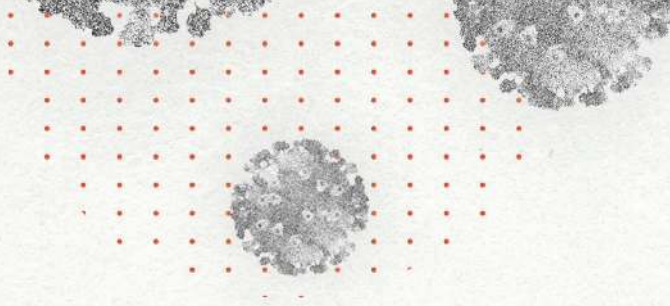

3. Without Push-Back This Will Never End

If this were strictly about ending Covid, there would be talk about ending vaccinations. Instead, it's the exact opposite. Australia and Canada have proved the mocked predictions of "conspiracy theorists" to be true. The only thing that's kept this from happening in America is the push back from people like you. You can't comply your way out of tyranny. If you compromise to keep your job, you've already lost it. If you do everything in your power to defend liberty, your children will inherit freedom!

4. Jesus Never Told You to Violate Your Conscience to "Love Your Neighbor"

For those who believe The Bible was written to teach unquestioned compliance with the government, here's a fun mental exercise: why were so many of its authors in prison? Why are Scriptures cherry picked to force Believers to feel like they must always be the ones to lay down their convictions to accommodate others? Loving your neighbor means to love your neighbor. It does not mean closing your church, wearing a mask, and having something you don't want injected into your body.

We are not defeated; Christ gave us dominion over all the power of The Devil and that dominion is intact.

When Paul's constitutional rights were being violated in Acts 22, he immediately invoked the law & put a stop to it. You are NOT wrong to follow his example! Christian leaders who twist The Bible to fit CNN narratives will face the judgement of God. Follow The Apostle Paul & refuse to allow tyrants to harm your body in violation of the law.

5. Why Does Everyone Promoting Forced Vaccinations Hate God?

Why does nearly every politician promoting forced vaccination hate the God of Abraham, Isaac & Jacob, hate Israel, hate Biblical sexuality, and hate the Church? Their social media posts mock faith & prayer. What spirit would you assume is behind that?

Would you let someone who hates your God, your family & your way of life cook your food for you? No. I certainly wouldn't let them put something in my bloodstream.

6. America Should Not be Owned by Pharmaceutical Companies

40 years ago, drugs were taken by the elderly, sparingly. Now? You're hard-pressed to find an American not taking multiple prescription medications. Youth sports coaches & camp counselors must pass out sacks of pills to 12-year-olds. Even the pets are on antidepressants! Pharmaceutical companies have enslaved a generation of Americans & have now taken their massive profits and moved to dictate public policy.

Like the illegal drug cartels that control Mexico, drug cartels with NYSE Ticker Symbols are looking to control American life. This is wrong! America is governed by THE PEOPLE. Not by Pfizer, Moderna, and Johnson & Johnson. They don't own you, and on these grounds, you are right to resist their tyranny.

7. It's Far from Risk-Free

The decision to be vaccinated is presented by MSM as a decision to do something essentially risk-free. A pile of dead bodies tells a much different story. Every day, new stories are posted on social media by victims with Myocarditis, Bell's Palsy, miscarriages & more.

Why should someone be forced to receive something that carries the potential for devastating health consequences? People are not selfish to resist Covid vaccinations, just sane.

8. The CDC?

Having to hear the CDC quoted as some type of unquestionable authority is laughable. Listening to Christian leaders quote their edicts like Scripture is maddening!

When a church abides by "CDC Guidance" they're allowing a pro-abortion, pro-trans kids group who believes men can get pregnant dictate when you can have church, whether you can sing, and if you can have communion. The CDC lost their credibility a long time ago. They are not above The Constitution. They're certainly not above God. You have EVERY right to disobey their desires.

9. LIARS

It's interesting to note, of all the sins, Satan is named in Scripture as The Father of Lies. God hates lying. All liars will have their place in Hell.

What do you call someone who tells you it's not safe to be in school, but sends their kids to private school? What do you call someone who tells you it's not safe to visit your family during the holidays, then immediately flies to see theirs? What do you call someone who says restaurants are unsafe; then secretly eats at a restaurant? What do you call someone who says masks must be worn at all times, but only wears one when a camera is recording?

I would call them a liar. Once someone is shown to be a liar, you're not wrong to never listen to another word they say. They don't follow their own orders, and neither will I.

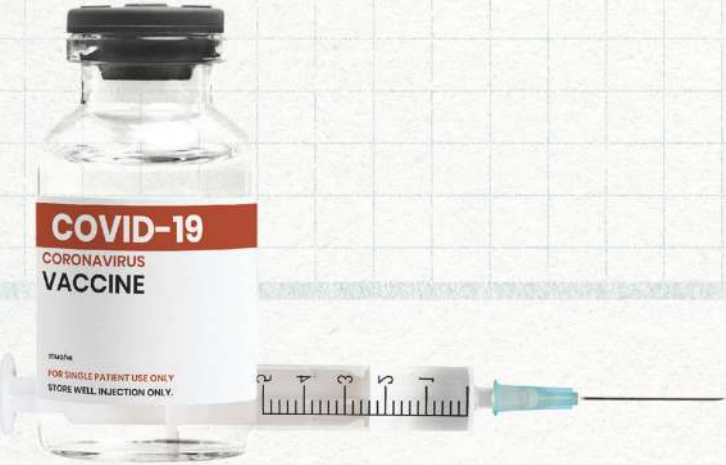

The Real Reason for Religious Exemption

James 5:14-16, "Is anyone among you sick? Let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith will save the sick, and the Lord will raise him up. And if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven. Confess your trespasses to one another, and pray for one another, that you may be healed. The effective, fervent prayer of a righteous man avails much."

The real reason you have a right to religious exemption has nothing to do with how vaccines are manufactured. The true reason for a religious exemption is that you, as a believer, have a right to trust Jehovah Rapha as your total healer.

Believe it or not, there are still Christians who have decided to not only trust Christ as their Savior, but their healer as well. There are still those who have rejected the help of man to instead trust The Great Physician alone! The Christianity that propelled Lilian B. Yeomans, Smith Wigglesworth & T.L. Osborn—The Christianity that caused John G. Lake to build the Healing Rooms of Spokane—The Christianity that caused them to lay the sick in the streets to meet with Peter's shadow—The Christianity of The Book of Acts is still alive and well today. A multitude of believers have strong faith in God & no trust in the arm of flesh!

The blood of Jesus has purchased your healing—and you have every right to reject lesser help for your greater covenant!

TO VAX OR NOT TO VAX

THAT IS THE QUESTION

by Kelly Victory M.D.

Let me preface everything that follows with a very simple and honest statement: I am not anti-vaccine. In fact, I am quite “pro-vaccine”, and have spoken and written prolifically on the importance of vaccines in the past. There are times when vaccine requirements make good sense based on solid scientific evidence and prudent public health policy; times when the risks of life-threatening infection are otherwise far too high, and the availability of treatments far too low; times when the data are overwhelmingly in support of mass vaccination following prolonged study and testing. But to quote Thomas Paine, these are the times that try men’s souls...

Manipulating the immune system is tricky business, and the body’s response to vaccines isn’t always readily apparent or predictable. It takes detailed and extensive testing to determine both the efficacy of a vaccine in preventing illness, as well as its safety in both the short and the long term. Historically, it has taken an average of 4 to 6 years for a vaccine to come to market, if it ever makes it at all; there are many, many viruses for which scientist have never succeeded in creating a safe and effective vaccine.

As with all medical treatments and interventions, the decision to take a vaccine should be done only after a thoughtful and well-informed risk-benefit analysis. That means an individual must understand his or her true risk from a disease or illness, and weigh it against the potential risks and benefits of the treatment or intervention. Unfortunately, for the duration of the COVID19 pandemic, it has been nearly impossible for people to access the information necessary to make this critical calculation for themselves and their families. Rather than providing objective, scientific data on the actual risk from the virus and the potential risks from the vaccine, the media and public health officials have opted to instill fear and anxiety in the population in hopes of swaying people’s healthcare decisions. Their biased reporting has caused the vast majority of people to vastly over-estimate their personal risk from the virus, while under-estimating their risks from the vaccine itself. They have refused to report on simple and successful prevention techniques, as well as the many safe, effective and readily available early treatment options. They have ignored the importance of “natural immunity” – the broad, robust and enduring protection that the millions of people who have had and recovered from COVID clearly possess. Without access to the information necessary to make an educated risk-benefit calculation, Americans have tragically been coerced, shamed, ridiculed and now mandated to take a vaccine that may not be medically necessary or in their best interests.

In reality, most people have a very low risk of serious infection or death from COVID19. In nearly every country, including the United States, the average age of death from COVID is actually higher than the life expectancy – Meaning that this is largely a serious disease in the elderly. Other than advanced age, the single greatest risk from COVID is obesity, followed by diabetes and heart disease. Healthy children have a nearly zero risk from COVID; while they can contract the virus, they rarely become significantly ill and furthermore have been shown not to spread the virus to others. Based on the CDC’s own statistics, generally healthy people under the age of 50 have no greater risk from COVID than from influenza. Furthermore, with more than 20 months of experience behind us, doctors have developed a very safe, effective, inexpensive and readily available treatment protocol, if and when one contracts the virus. Simple interventions such as supplementing Vitamin D and taking zinc, along with regular exercise, adequate sleep and stress management can profoundly decrease the risk of ever contracting COVID, yet public health leadership has been strangely silent on these issues.

To date, there have been nearly 44 million confirmed cases of COVID19 in the U.S. The CDC estimates that there have been as many as 5 or 6 times that number of actual cases, however, which means that more than 225 million Americans have likely had and recovered from the virus. Multiple studies have shown that these individuals now have strong protection against COVID – at least as good, if not better, than the immunity gleaned from the vaccines. This is consistent with our experience with other similar viruses, including SARS-CoV1 in 2003; people who had and recovered from that virus still have powerful immunity today, 18 years later! There is no scientific rationale for COVID-recovered people to be vaccinated, and there is mounting evidence that they may, in fact, have a higher risk of adverse reactions if they are.

As of this writing, there are three COVID19 vaccines available in the United States: Moderna, Pfizer and Johnson& Johnson. In an effort to rush these vaccines to market, all three underwent very minimal testing, with highly accelerated clinical trials. All three were released with an Emergency Use Authorization only, not an FDA approval. Large groups of people were not included in the limited testing that was conducted; pregnant women, lactating women, people with underlying auto-immune diseases, children, cancer patients and those who had already had and recovered from COVID were purposely excluded from the trials. The long-term safety profile of these vaccines, including the potential impact on the neurological system, fertility, or the development of cancers and auto-immune diseases remains completely unknown. None of these vaccines were in existence a year ago, so there simply hasn't been adequate time to evaluate their medium and long-term side effects. In contrast, routine immunizations such as measles, mumps, rubella, chicken pox and polio that are commonly required for children to attend school, or for people to serve in the military, have decades of testing and safety data behind them.

The New York Times

Importantly, the current COVID vaccines utilize technology that has not been used successfully in vaccines previously. Traditional vaccines use weakened or killed virus to stimulate an immune response. Instead, the Moderna and Pfizer-BioNTech vaccines use mRNA, genetic material that ultimately instructs the body to produce one of the spike proteins found on the outside of COVID19, in hopes that the individual will then manufacture antibodies against that same spike. For more than a decade, scientists have worked to create a safe and effective vaccine utilizing mRNA, however they have always failed during the testing period with sometimes disastrous results. The J&J COVID vaccine does something similar, but uses a harmless virus to deliver the genetic "instruction manual" for the production of the spike protein. The J&J vaccines were produced or validated with the aid of fetal cell lines, to which people with certain religious convictions may strongly object.

In addition, the COVID19 spike protein is highly pathogenic – capable of producing disease -- on its own, and the danger presented by introducing this protein into the human body cannot be overstated. Studies have shown that the vaccine does not remain at the injection site in the shoulder, but actually migrates to multiple different organ systems, including the lungs, heart, kidneys and intestines, with significant amounts concentrating in the reproductive organs. Worldwide, we have seen a worrisome incidence of blood clots, heart inflammation, neurologic symptoms and fertility issues following vaccination with all three of these vaccines. Without adequate testing and long-term safety data, it is simply impossible to know the extent of potential harm from the vaccine-induced production of spike proteins.

Lastly, the "efficacy" of the current COVID19 vaccines has proven to be far less than was predicted. While we were initially told that the vaccines were upwards of 95% effective in preventing infection, in less than 6 months we have seen a precipitous fall in that number and an increasing number of breakthrough infections amongst the "fully vaccinated". As a result, the drug manufacturers and public health authorities are recommending boosters, the number, frequency and side-effects of which are completely unknown. The vaccines are now being touted as able to "decrease the severity of the illness" rather than to prevent actual infection. Given that vaccinated people can clearly still contract and transmit the virus, it begs the rationale for in any way discriminating between the vaccinated and the unvaccinated.

Ultimately, the decision to take a COVID vaccine should remain an individual one, based on that individual's personal health history, risk factors, previous COVID infection and religious beliefs, respecting that no two people's risk-benefit calculations are identical. Given the low risk of serious infection for the majority of the population, the large percentage who have existing natural immunity, the availability of safe and effective early treatment options, and the paucity of both short and long-term safety data on the vaccines, mass vaccination and vaccination mandates are both unnecessary and unwise. We have suffered as a result of this virus for far too long; it's time we stop suffering from unnecessary mandates that defy the science and deny individual freedom of choice based on an informed, well-reasoned risk-benefit analysis. To further quote Thomas Paine, Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as FREEDOM should not be highly rated.

Christians, Vaccines, & Religious Exemptions

By KrisAnne Hall, JD

American Christians are facing an attack upon their faith that hasn't been seen in America since the 1700's. Christians are being told that they must choose between their jobs and their faith. Church leaders are arguing that freedom of conscience is not a Biblical principle. We might say as Thomas Paine said in 1776: "These are the times that try men's souls."

The good news is, despite what those in government might mandate or what those in a pulpit might preach, America was built upon the fundamental principles of individual liberty, freedom of religion, and the right to live according to the dictate of one's conscience. The bad news is, too many Christian Americans do not know these facts and do not possess the knowledge that delivers the courage to stand for their God-given rights. The people perish for lack of knowledge.

What do Christians do when employers, the government, or schools demand taking the shot when doing so would violate sincerely held religious beliefs? Do Christians have to submit? Can they refuse to comply? Our Constitutions and our laws support a Christian's right to say no; and American Christians need to know why and how.

Is the Bible a Credible Argument Against Taking the Shot?

First, it is now common knowledge that all three of the currently available COVID-19 vaccines are derived from, manufactured with, tested on, developed with, or otherwise connected to aborted baby cell lines. As confirmation to this fact, a Pfizer employee recently became a whistleblower when she reported internal Pfizer documents and communications to Project Veritas. In these internal Pfizer documents are detailed accounts of the Vice President of Pfizer and his employees admitting to the use of abort baby cells, and actively engaging in practices to attempt to keep this information from the public. This ought to tell the American Christian that Pfizer knows that the American people will have a problem with the use of aborted baby cells and to protect their product they are willing to actively hide that information from the public.

A Bible-believing Christian ought to have a sincerely held religious belief that abortion is the murder of human beings and murder is a sin. Therefore, every Bible believing Christian ought to hold a firmly held religious objection specifically against any vaccinations resulting from the research or use of aborted baby cell lines.

However, there have recently been an influx of religious leaders promoting their opinion as gospel that it's not only ok to take these vaccines but also the "Christian thing to do." One such argument was presented by Southern Baptist ethicist Russell Moore. In his article, Moore claims that the fact that these shots are made using aborted baby cell lines does not equate to "sin." Moore asserts that the abortions from which the research is derived happened so long ago that believers have a "sin protection." In other words, time has washed away the sin of murdering babies for research purposes and drug production.

Moore may believe that his "ethical analysis" is the standard for all Christians, but a clear reading of the law and of Scripture beg to differ. As a matter of fact, it is not legally proper for Moore, your employer, or the government to determine whether an individual has a correct understanding of religious doctrine or whether an individual's sincerely held religious beliefs are shared broadly among members of a faith. As the Supreme Court has recognized, someone's "religious beliefs need not be acceptable, logical, consistent, or comprehensible to others in order to merit First Amendment protection." Thomas v. Rev. Bd. of Ind. Emp. Sec. Div., 450 U.S. 707, 714 (1981). See also Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 531 (1993) (same). Additionally, it is also not necessary for anyone to hold membership in or adherence to the tenets of an organized religion to have a credible claim for exemption. See Frazee v. Ill. Dep't of Emp. Sec., 489 U.S. 829, 834 (1989). Again, the Constitution and the law provides protection for everyone's sincerely held religious beliefs even if some members of the same religious organization, sect, or denomination disagree. Moreover, the denial of anyone's request for a religious accommodation and exemption based upon the views of other individuals who disagree is unlawful. It is legally irrelevant what other individuals think or religiously believe. Once someone has articulated their sincerely held religious objections to acceptance of the currently available COVID-19 vaccines, the proper inquiry is over.

Another errant argument has been promoted by another self-appointed gatekeeper, Robert Jeffress. "There is no credible religious argument against the vaccines," Jeffress claims, because other medications like Tylenol, Pepto Bismol, or Ibuprofen may have also been created using aborted baby cells. What if a Christian does not take the drugs on this list? Would Jeffress change his mind about the credibility of the Christian vaccine objection?

*Land of the Free
Home of the Brave*

While some people may hold sincere religious beliefs against taking ANY vaccines, many others only hold religious beliefs against accepting those vaccines derived from aborted fetal cell lines used in testing, development, or manufacturing. Some past vaccines were derived using aborted fetal cells, some weren't. Some medicines were derived from aborted baby cells, some weren't. Many people were unaware that ANY were based on these cells but are discovering so now.

To make relevant someone's past medications or vaccinations is like asking someone to say "yes" to a question of "have you ever smoked tobacco," and say he has no basis or right going forward, to be a "nonsmoker;" or if one has ever had (or coerced someone else to have) an abortion, one can no longer oppose abortion and truthfully claim to be "pro-Life" going forward.

Jeffress's proclamation is an attack on millennia of Christian theology of "repentance" and turning from sin, as set forth in 1 Corinthians 6:9-11. Every born-again Christian knows the Bible is set upon the foundation of God's power to bring new wisdom and change the heart of man, but Jeffress's premise presumes otherwise. Thus, questions regarding past vaccines or other drugs are what lacks credibility. Jeffress's argument also violates all liberties of First Amendment and many other rights. Perhaps Jeffress does not support God's power of conviction, repentance, or forgiveness? At best, one might argue that a person is inconsistent in their belief. Yet that does not preclude anyone else's right to object just because someone else decides to take Pepto Bismol!

Regardless of what Moore, Jeffress, or the Pope might say, our Constitutions and the law both support every individual's right to refuse to take these vaccines according to their sincerely held religious objection. Self-proclaimed Christian Belief Dictators don't get to decide for us.

A Christian's Sincerely Held Objections

Christian business owners ought to know they also have the right to refuse to mandate these vaccines upon their employees with the same Biblical and legal justifications as their employees. If a Christian has a sincerely held religious objection to the vaccines, it is then reasonable and within their right to say, "No." In that same respect an employer has the right to say: "To mandate these vaccines upon my employees would violate my sincerely held religious beliefs, so I will not force my employees to take the vaccine in order to keep their jobs."

If a Christians has an objection to the use of aborted babies for research or drug production, then they have the right to declare their religious objection and every Christian employer has the right to refuse to enforce these drugs upon their employees. If a Christian believes that any mandate that restricts his ability to completely trust and depend upon Jesus Christ for healing and divine health is a conflict of his faith, he has the right to assert his religious objection.

A person may believe, the antichrist system will force certain things upon people by restricting the ability to buy or sell unless they cooperate and comply with coercive dictates. They may believe that the vaccination mandate is part of, or precursor to that system because it restricts a person's ability to buy, sell, or engage in their profession under threat of force. Therefore, if someone believes the Scriptures justify them to not participate in such mandates, they have a right to stand for their religious beliefs and refuse to take the vaccine, and it does not matter whether anyone agrees with him or not. The liberty of individual conviction is the core of religious liberty.

According to the law, once someone asserts their sincerely held religious objection, their employer, the government, or school must then offer "reasonable accommodations" unless the employer, the government, or school can show that to do so would cause "undue hardship." What is legally important to understand is that the standard is not "absolutely no hardship" and the burden to prove "undue hardship" rests up the one mandating the vaccine, not the Christian asserting their right to religious exemption.

What If They Deny or Ignore An Objection?

These are the legal facts according to our Constitutions, Title VII, the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and many State laws. The final question that must be answered is, what if you have a government so bent on forcing an agenda upon Christians that they will willfully violate our Constitutions and the law and use corrupt courts to support these violations? That's when Christians must know that their rights to freedom of conscience and control of their own body are God-given rights not a government granted privileges. With every legal argument we make to defend our rights, the enemy comes up with an excuse to overturn our argument. Religious exemptions are not a permanent fix, they are a temporary measure to allow people the time to get their houses in order and stand in the face of lawlessness. The day is quickly approaching when religious beliefs will no longer be tolerated. Knowing that God is the source of our Rights is essential in knowing how and why we must defend them.

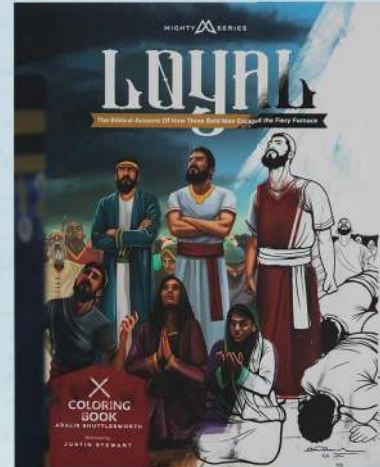

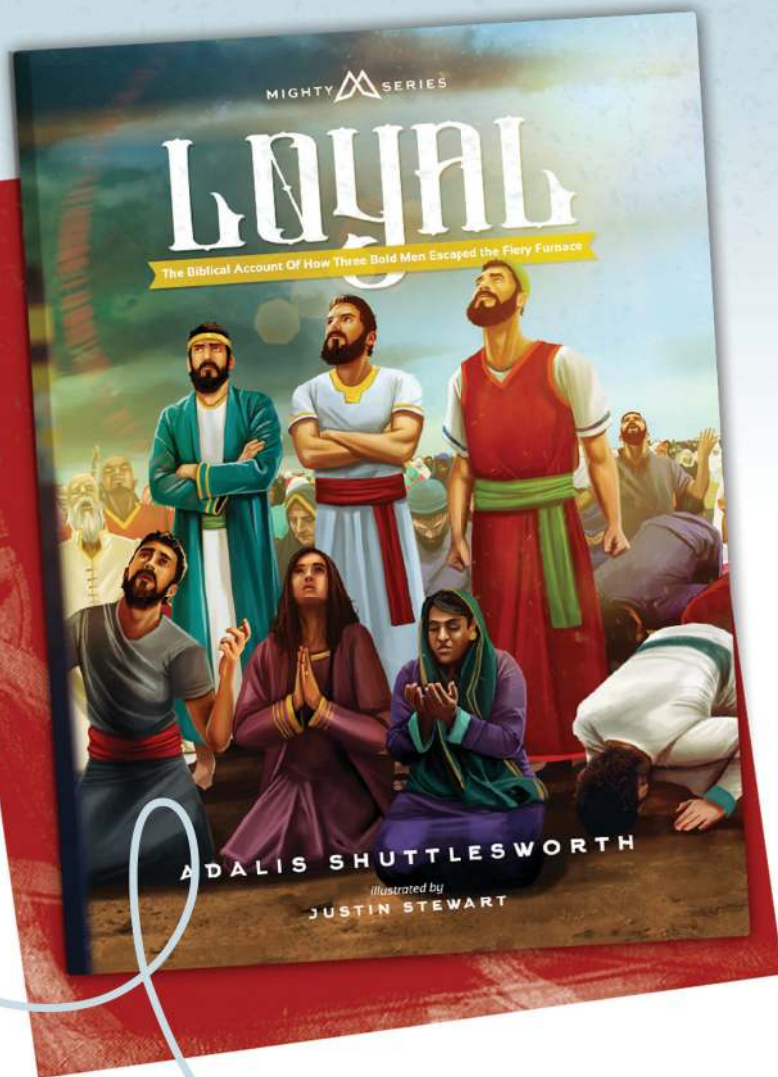

The fact that our rights are God-given shouldn't be a matter of debate. The Declaration of Independence, our first foundational document as independent States, has as it's opening statement: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights..." The Constitution of the United States and every State Constitution both affirm these God-given rights. The day is rapidly approaching where every Christian will have to declare their allegiance: to the God of Heaven or the Antichrist system. Americans will have to decide, do they stand for their God-given Rights, or do they surrender to fear and the need for comfort. If a person truly knows that their rights come from God and not from government the choice will be much easier. If a Christian truly knows that God is their provider and their comforter, then fear will not prevent them from the stand that will ultimately keep their children from being enslaved.

Thomas Paine gave his generation and ours great encouragement when he said: "Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly: it is dearness only that gives every thing its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as FREEDOM should not be highly rated."

As Christians, we ought to know that the victory is already won. But we must also trust, as the battle for the souls of this Earth rage, we must occupy and defend God's gifts. We must stand in faith, come what may, trusting that the Author of our Liberty is also our Protector and Provider, and He has promised that He will never leave us nor forsake us. Stand in courage. Stand in boldness. Stand and you will be rewarded.

increase your joy

Proverbs 17:22
tells us,
"A merry
heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones."

“...FOR THE JOY OF THE LORD IS YOUR STRENGTH!”

— NEHEMIAH 8:10

The joy of the Lord is a secret weapon given to every believer. It’s our strength and the only way we can access anything from heaven. (Isaiah 12:3) Joy isn’t something that’s mystical or ethereal. Joy is easily accessible!

Here are four ways to amp up your joy—in fact, these are some of the ONLY ways to increase this wonderful heavenly force.

1. KNOW GOD’S WORD – “For wisdom will enter your heart, and knowledge will fill you with joy.” (Psalm 2:10) Wisdom and knowledge are always found in God’s Word. That’s why it’s so important to get it! Look at what Proverbs 4:4-7 says, “He taught me also, and said unto me, Let thine heart retain my words: keep my commandments, and live. Get wisdom, get understanding; forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth. Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding.” Hosea 4:6 also says, “My people perish for lack of knowledge.” If your well of joy is dry, keep digging for the water! Too many people don’t access joy because they don’t want to dig! The Bible likens the Word to water. The Word if God is alive and living water, is water that never runs dry. It’s water that cleanses and makes new! Get in the Word for your continual flow of JOY.

2. TRUST IN THAT WORD! – “I pray that God, the source of hope, will fill you completely with joy and peace because you trust in him. Then you will overflow with confident hope through the power of the Holy Spirit.” (Romans 15:13) God just made a promise to you. He said He would fill you with joy and peace as long as you TRUST in Him. What does trust mean? Webster’s says it right; “Confidence; a reliance or resting of the mind on the integrity...of another person.” Rest your mind on the integrity of God’s Word. When you rest in that knowledge, joy and peace belong to you! God’s promises do not rest on our name or ministry name, they rest on God’s name! When God promises something you can take it to the bank—that’s a check that will never bounce! So why doubt? Never question God’s integrity...NEVER!

Rest your mind on the integrity of God’s Word.

by Adalis Shuttlesworth

3. GOD’S PRESENCE – “You make known to me the path of life; in your presence there is fullness of joy; at your right hand are pleasures forevermore.” (Psalm 16:11) The presence of God LITERALLY gives you everything you need. It brings clarity, it brings direction, it breaks the heavy burden and it brings joy! God’s presence is tapped into by praise! Psalm 22:3 says God lives in the praises of His people! All you have to do is praise God. Praise Him for all He’s done and all He’s about to do! When you release those words, faith begins to rise and God steps in!

4. ASK! – “Until now you have not asked for anything in my name. Ask and you will receive, and your joy will be complete.” (John 16:24) There are too many people out there afraid to ask! What will make your joy complete? Have you said it out loud, or are you afraid to? Is it getting married? Getting out of debt? Buying a house? VOCALIZE those things you want to be manifested in your life! Have the courage to ASK GOD and don’t think small. All you’re required to do is ask. He never said “Ask AND figure it all out.” He simply said, ASK.

If you do these things everyday for the next 21 days, your life won’t even look the same! Do 10 minutes on each. Take 10 minutes to read, 10 minutes praise, and 10 minutes to ask, then saturate it all with trust—rest in knowing God has already done it!

Twenty Secrets to an Unbreakable Marriage

Excerpt from Communication Key #5

COMMUNICATION IN MARRIAGE IS ABSOLUTELY INTEGRAL.

Communication in marriage is absolutely integral.

Now, I know this might shock some people because it's usually the woman who wants to communicate and the man who finds it difficult. But for me, it was very difficult to vocalize how I felt about a situation. If I was upset, I would just say to myself, 'you know what, I'm just going to sweep this under the rug.'

Then I'd ignore it, and ignore it, and ignore it, not realizing that the issue was compounding.

Then one day, Jonathan walked up to me while I was doing what I do best—holding a grudge—and said, "you know, we're not going to go to bed angry with each other. It's biblical. You can't let the sun go down on your anger. So, we're going to sit here and we're going to talk." For the first time, Ephesians 4:26 came to life. I had to initiate an action and open my mouth to communicate even when I was uncomfortable. I knew I could not let the sun go down on my anger. For the sake of your marriage, it's important to communicate effectively, even if you have to cry through it in the beginning.

Communication might also feel sacrificial to you because it can mean bearing your soul to your spouse. Do it anyway. Practice the art of communication because your spouse cannot read your mind.

I used to think if I slammed something, or shut the door hard enough, Jonathan would know I was upset. Now I know it's impossible for him to read between the lines! I had to communicate what bothered me. Only after I communicated effectively could we move forward.

I also realized that men, especially, need a clear picture of what women are dealing with or going through. This can be tough for us as women because sometimes our emotions are running like a roller coaster. We can't help it. It's the way God made us. There are going to be some moments where we'll cry or get angry. But, whatever the mood, communicate to the best of your ability. You will gradually get better at communicating; it's a wonderful skill!

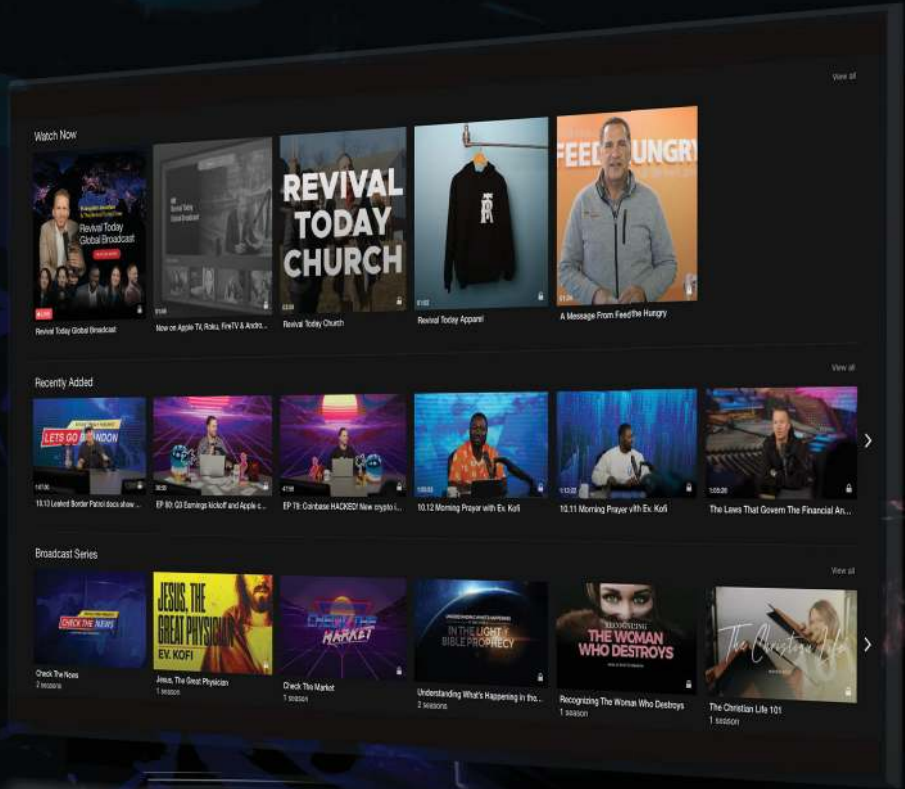

Here's a communication tip: talking, yelling, and/or making remarks that drag the other person down is not communicating effectively.

Effective communication must be a means to an end. Open up your heart and ask, "what can we do to fix the situation?" Then seek a solution together.

If you find you're not feeling loved, ask yourself why. Then communicate. Open up to your spouse. Communicate, communicate, and communicate some more; the results will be worth the effort.
